May 15–21, 2016

Dear Friends:

I am delighted to extend my warmest greetings to everyone marking National Public Works Week 2016, organized by the Canadian Public Works Association (CPWA).

This annual observance raises public awareness of the critical role that our nation’s public infrastructure and services play in our lives. Without the roads, bridges, water and sanitation systems on which we all rely, modern life would scarcely be possible. National Public Works Week is also a wonderful opportunity to highlight the tireless efforts of the thousands of men and women of this vital sector who design, build, operate and maintain our public infrastructure.

I would like to commend Canada’s public works professionals for their dedication to ensuring that our communities remain wonderful places in which to live, play and work. I am sure that the many activities organized around this year’s theme “Public Works Always There” will be enlightening and enjoyable.

Please accept my best wishes for a successful National Public Works Week.

Sincerely,

The Rt. Hon. Justin P.J. Trudeau, P.C., M.P.
Prime Minister of Canada
